

The Lion and the Bull

by Ambrose Bierce

A Lion wishing to lure a Bull to a place where it would be safe to attack him, said:
"My friend, I have killed a fine sheep; will you come with me and partake of the mutton?"

"With pleasure," said the Bull, "as soon as you have refreshed yourself a little for the journey. Pray have some grass."